

Dubai Watch Week 2023 News and New Watch Releases – Part 1

Visitors to this year's Dubi Watch Week will be delighted to know that the Fondation Haute Horlogerie has announced that it will unveil a new connected art experience produced exclusively for DWW23. The installation will comprise twelve exclusive works, under the aegis of the foundation's Watches & Culture pillar. Exhibited throughout the fair, these illustrations were created especially for twelve of the FHH's partner brands.

The artworks feature key details of each brand's iconic timepieces reinterpreted as an artistic abstraction. Visitors can scan the QR codes found alongside each artwork and an animation will appear on their mobile phones, immersing viewers into that brand's universe. This makes for a potent mix of educational yet entertaining content, which visitors can use to answer in the subsequent Dubai Watch Week quiz, for the chance to win prizes.

Here is a selection of the watches that will be on display at DWW23.

Beauregard – Lili Candy White Gold

Lili Candy White Gold is a sweet swirl of amethysts, topazes, carnelians, opals and garnets, all meticulously nestled in a circle of diamonds. The “White Gold” case is crafted by blending white gold with Palladium 500, an alloy that is harder and more durable as well as possessing an innate radiance without the need for rhodium plating.

This ensemble of jewels includes 70 diamonds on the dial, 80 on the bezel and 16 adorning the case, resulting in a watch that sparkles with 166 VVS-grade diamonds. The case measures 33mm in diameter and is 9.65 millimetres thick. Its hands and buckle, crafted from 18-carat white gold, add to its exquisite allure.
