

IKEPOD

This brand is already well known on the watchmaking scene, but it has been taken over and relaunched in recent years by Christian-Louis Col (who has also just taken over the independent French brand Kloklers). Among the models presented this year is the limited edition Skypod Ola with a brown dial and titanium case, equipped with a La Joux-Perret automatic movement. This series of watches was designed by the Claesson Koivisto Rune interior design studio, and each model bears the first name of one of its designers. $$$$

BELCHENGRUPPE

This Swiss brand launched in 2020 is named after the five Belchen mountains located in the area where the borders of Switzerland, Germany and France meet. These mountains acted as an archaic solar calendar in the era before mechanical time measurement. The view of the sun rising over the other Belchen mountains from the top of the Alsace Belchen marks the start of spring, summer, autumn, and winter. That's the inspiration for the creations of Belchengruppe, Visuren #22 and 120° Mitternacht, limited to 50 pieces each and equipped with a Sellita SW290-1 automatic calibre, whose case is shaped using complex faceting with clear lines to create a unique character. $$$

BEAUREGARD

A confectionery on the wrist! Canadian designer Alexandre Beauregard is a master at creating watches with dials that are simply magical. His Lili Candy White Gold is no exception, with the splendour of its carefully selected stones: amethysts, topazes, cornalines, opals and garnets set in a circle of diamonds. The case, meanwhile, is made from a noble and precious metal in the platinum family, a combination of white gold enriched with Palladium 500 for pure, dazzling, unalterable brilliance. $$$$$
